

Dear Sean Madorin,

To start off, my name is Isabelle Roberge and I just finished my second year of nursing in the BScN collaborative program between Georgian College and York University. I have had the pleasure of having Avinash as my professor for 2 years. He taught me both Anatomy and Physiology 1 and 2 as well as Pathophysiology 1 and 2. I myself as well as my fellow nursing friends purposefully arranged our schedules just so we would have Avinash as our professor. Avinash is very passionate about teaching and is able to foster the learning of his students in a variety of ways, making sure that we maximize our full potential. He is always putting forth new innovative ways to engage his students in activities. Whenever something is unclear, Avinash is always eager to provide an answer in the most understandable way. I have learned a lot from Avinash whether it was related to course material or real life situations. I believe that Avinash is a prime example of what we as students look for in our faculty members and Georgian College is very fortunate to have Avinash apart of their team. I hope you consider these wonderful aspects of this dedicated man when reviewing him.

Sincerely,

Isabelle Roberge
